This week has been all about spreading love and showing kindness. With Valentine’s day coming up we wanted to talk about being kind to others. This group of kindergarteners are all extremely kind people (probably the kindest class I have ever had) so it wasn’t hard for them to come up with ideas. It was also really neat to see them practice kindness in different situations. You all are raising amazing humans and should be so proud! We also had our preschool classes come and visit our classroom this week. They were able to see how a kindergarten classroom works and were even able to make some Valentine’s crafts with us. It was really fun. And of course our kindergarteners were extremely helpful and welcoming.

Next Friday, February 14th is Valentine’s Day! We will be having a small celebration and handing out Valentine’s in the afternoon. We will start around 1:00. A note went home last week with more details. Each child can bring valentines to pass out if they would like. Remember not to personalize the Valentine’s (it makes them too hard to pass out). Also, if you would like to bring a healthy-ish snack to share with the class for our party that would be great too. We are in need of paper bags with handles for our Valentines. If you have any you would like to donate please let me know.

I hope to see everyone at the crab feed tonight! Have a great weekend!
