

Clemons' Class News!

April 1, 2022

Hello, Parents!

Welcome April! This week in math, we learned a trick to multiply by nine and learned more about fractions and types of angles. We took a test today on the unit about our roles and rights as citizens of the United States. This unit sparked some very interesting discussions in class and I'm happy the students are really thinking about these important duties we have as citizens. In science, we began a new unit about people and resources and how to be responsible with the earth. In English, we worked on grammar, including punctuation and capitalization, and learned about different verb forms. Today was especially fun as the students were able to cash in their tickets for some cool prizes. I may have had a little fun today with some harmless pranks, but they are certainly going to learn to read ALL the directions! :-)
