Hello, Parents!

April showers bring May flowers! We are certain of this because our allergies are working overtime! Thank God for the beautiful weather we have been having!

It's getting close...we are on the final countdown on our way to fourth grade! I'm super excited for my students and all they have accomplished. We still have much to do and aren't slowing down anytime soon! This week, we started learning about the water cycle in science. They will have a project due on Friday, May 6th. Please be sure to check your email for details.

We also took on the challenge of division with and without remainders. I got a lot of "deer in headlights" looks, but they seem to be catching on. We will actually finish the math workbook within the next two weeks! How exciting! I'm glad we will have a couple of weeks to just review and refine their math skills!

Prodigy granted us early access to the English tutoring game. I've created multiple enrichment and review lessons on the platform and hope this will really help them improve their English and reading skills. We are finishing our first essay this week which will be both social studies and English grade. The bar is high, but they are reaching and exceeding it daily.

Here is what's in store for next week!
